

Only one-third of students read proficiently (NAEP)

Only 51% of teaching institutions provide adequate instruction in the science of reading (NCTQ, 2020), creating a huge opportunity to transform student learning

Yet, 95% of students CAN learn to read if taught explicitly with instruction based on the science of reading

Teacher effectiveness is the No. 1 factor impacting student achievement

WHAT TEACHERS SAY

- 87% agree the content is relevant to their professional goals
- 88% feel confident delivering instruction to students based on the science of reading
- 90% agreed the live sessions gave them deeper understanding than print/online materials alone
- 92% agreed Lexia LETRS session content enhanced their ability to use research-based practices in their role
- 93% agreed they can apply the skills and concepts they learned from Lexia LETRS training in their school

When starting Lexia LETRS training, I chose to work with three of my most struggling readers for my case study. One student in particular has really shown incredible gains. This student came into my classroom saying, 'I don't know how to read,' or 'I can't read.' As a third-grade student, this isn't something he should be saying. It really came down to his lack of phonological and phonemic awareness. Using specific strategies and lessons from Lexia LETRS, he has shown an entire year's worth of reading gains at just this point in the school year. Now, he is still behind grade level, but this targeted approach will help close his gaps. He no longer says he can't read. He volunteers. He wants to read, and he is showing so much more confidence in himself. Lexia LETRS transforms how educators think about teaching reading. I know it has really changed my view of it and how I plan instruction."
